— Wedding Rules —

The term “destination wedding” is becoming synonymous with marriage for most couples, but what could be more romantic a setting than the sun sinking down over blue waters with tropical mountains in the background. Saying your vows in Mexico not only gives you a picturesque wedding, it also gives your friends and a family an unforgettable experience. Like all formal procedures, there are a few steps in the process, but they are not difficult. So don't be intimidated at having the wedding of your dreams, simply be prepared.

A civil marriage is the only legally recognized service in Mexico, but the religious ceremony is what is performed on the beach. For this reason you need the following paperwork translated into Spanish, notarized by the nearest Mexican Consulate and approved in your home country: marriage application forms, passport, tourist permits, birth certificates, divorce decree/death certificate (if applicable), and medical results. Once all the paperwork is in order, you will also need the marriage certificate fee (around $30 USD), a small fee to have the service in a location other than the local Registry Office, and everything submitted a few days prior to the actual service for approval. This will ensure a fully legal and internationally recognized marriage. Be sure to also pick up your Acta de Matrimonio, a certified copy of the marriage certificate, once the civil service is completed. This ensures that you have completed everything.

Most importantly, be sure to have your passport and tourist card (given to you on your flight). Blood tests are required from both you and your future spouse. These must be done locally for both legal and time requirements. The test results must be in Spanish and within a specific time frame of the actual marriage application form. You need four witnesses present during the ceremony all with valid passports or local identification. Once you have completed the proper forms, your wedding certificate will be recognized world-wide, but it is still a good idea to have it legalized in Mexico outside the country. This process is the same as any country. Simply take the forms to the proper authority's office. Check with your on-site wedding planner for locations.
