

Wedding Photography by Ron Dressel Photography

Next to picking your spouse, one of the most important decisions you'll make about your wedding is deciding which photographer is the right one for you. Your photographer will be right there with you for almost every moment of your wedding day.

My approach to wedding photography: I take on a photo-journalistic approach to wedding photography. My focus is on capturing candid moments with an editorial emphasis to tell the story of your wedding day with an artistic touch. My style is clean and simplistic; utilizing available light whenever possible. I love capturing emotion, genuine expressions, and the love shared between couples on their wedding day!

Each wedding photographer has their own personal way of capturing a wedding. It is very important to choose a photographer whose work you love to capture your wedding. After your celebration you have your wedding photographs of yourselves, family, and friends to look back on, enjoy, and remember all the love shared on your wedding day!
