A Few Tips to Get Your Flowers Ready

1

Bring your flowers inside and unpack them as soon as possible, this will guarantee their long-lasting freshness.

2

Pull on the white lace ribbon to remove the flowers from the box.

3

Take a look at your flowers and call us if you see or notice any problem at delivery.

4

Your flowers may arrive a bit thirsty due to their long journey. They may take 2-3 days to fully open.

5

It's natural that some of the outer petals might look bruised because of transport. You can easily fix this by removing them to reveal the fresh petals beneath. This is very common, especially with roses.

6

Make sure you have enough containers to hold all your flowers before you start to unpack them. It will also be helpful to have pruning shears on hand.

7

Fill your containers with 2-3" of fresh water and add the flower food powder included in the box. Make sure the level is low enough so you can place them in the water and not get the ribbon wet or damaged.

8

Do this one bunch at a time, removing the flowers from their package and placing them directly into a container. Avoid handling them as much as possible.

9

Avoid placing your flowers in direct sunlight, wind or extreme temperatures. 60-70° is ideal for keeping your flowers fresh.

10

The easiest way to prepare each bunch of flowers is to use scissors to cut the rubber bands and tie downs before pulling the bunch out.

11

You may choose to leave the tags on so you can differentiate each bunch of flowers.
