I believe emotions captured in a still frame can be more than memories; they should be felt.

As a photojournalist, I strive to capture the candid emotions of the moment. I want to get to know my clients in order to express their personalities through the images I take. For over ten years I have approached photography as an artist, hoping to capture the essence of the human experience we all share. I believe emotions captured in a still frame can be more than memories; they should be felt. I like to participate in the wedding planning process to anticipate the most important photographs, to make sure important events have the best possible lighting, and to allow myself to remain unobtrusive and respectful to precious and candid moments I intend to capture.

I believe in the value of documenting little surprises that make your day special and unique to you, so I prefer to be present for the entire day, from early morning preparations until the close of the reception. Because I care about you and your time, I return preliminary photographs within two weeks, and your photos are uploaded to a secure server and backed up in two locations to prevent accidents. The candid moments that make up the most meaningful memories of our lives cannot be repeated, so it is my priority to ensure that your smiles and tears are preserved for nostalgic moments later on. My process is unique. Your wedding is unique. Let me compose lasting memories you can cherish for the rest of your life. . .

A photograph of a young man with short brown hair and black-rimmed glasses, wearing a blue denim shirt, smiling broadly. A woman with long dark hair is leaning in from the right, kissing him on the cheek. They are standing in front of a two-story brick building with several arched windows. The scene is outdoors, likely in a parking lot, with a white railing visible on the right side of the building.

A young man and woman are shown in profile, facing each other and smiling warmly. The man is on the left, wearing a dark blue button-down shirt. The woman is on the right, wearing a light blue floral patterned top. She has long, wavy brown hair and is wearing a watch and a ring. Her hand is resting on the man's shoulder. The background is a soft-focus outdoor setting with trees and a path.
