OUR HISTORY

The Palmer Opera House, built in 1867 by Joseph Palmer, formerly housed three commercial store bays on the street level and a community opera house on the second floor. The original structure was destroyed by fire on December 20, 1871.

Early the following year, on Jan. 5, 1872, Palmer said he “planned to create one of the largest and best Opera Houses and Halls in Western New York for the efforts made by the firemen and citizens”. He fulfilled the promise, holding the largest party ever held in Cuba on February 6, 1874. For over 70 years, the restored opera house hosted a wide variety of cultural and recreational events, including operas, minstrel shows, theater, and vaudeville shows. The Cuba High School held graduation exercises, basketball games and junior and senior class plays there until the late 1930s.

Severely damaged in the winter of 2001, when one of the roof beams upstairs fell, the opera house lay exposed to the outside elements for years. Extensive rehabilitation efforts began on the property in 2006, restoring the Palmer Block and reopening the Palmer Opera House. Come join us today and be part of the new history of this old gem.
