Photography Pricing

I remember planning my engagement. The nervous feelings associated with planning the whole thing was crazy. The sweaty palms; the timing; should it be private or public; should I have family there; should I get it filmed or photographed lol? There was a lot of questions but I stayed focus on the reasoning behind it.....the person I was proposing to. My relationship with her gave me all the answers I needed.

For over a year I had been buying little meaningless gifts for her. For Christmas it was a set of earrings with her first names initial L. For her birthday I got her a bat. I gave her a copy of W magazine, a sling shot (Y), a surprise breakfast donut, (O), etc. She had no idea why I was buying these random things

When the time came, at a hotel room, I laid out this collage of photos for our anniversary. She thought it was cute.....I then told her how over the past year every little gift had a reason and with the photos, the gifts spelt out "Will You Marry Me?"

Then came the planning of the Wedding lol. MORE tough questions but that's just it. Going through all the questions together and making tough choices that go into planning a Wedding is a great way to start a marriage.

Finding the right venue and vendors to capture your vision all while sticking to a budget. The Weddings "What venue?" is tomorrow's "Where are we raising our kids and calling home?"; the colors are tomorrow's kids bedroom, the best man and maid of honor is tomorrow's godparents .....

and the Wedding Day photographer just might be your baby's very first steps.
